Research Interests:

Research and development of the new underwater moored profiles: Aqualog, Winchi, and the ice tethered profiler. These devices are essentially the carriers of various environmental probes such as SBE 52MP CTD, Nortek Aquadopp current meter, AANDERAA oxygen optode sensor, and other sensors, which are broadly used by the oceanographic community. While moving up and down between the sea surface and the bottom at pre-defined time intervals, the sensors make measurements and collect vertical profiles of various parameters. By now, two prototype models were built and several pilot experiments were carried out at the Black, Baltic, Japan, Mediterranean, Kara, and Caspian Seas in 2010-2019. The profilers are suitable for environmental monitoring of offshore oil and gas explorations, such as oil platforms at the sea shelf.
